Of course they base the right to make investments wherever they please, but it does seem to me that it would be better for them to take hold and help boom Maine." There is solid food for reflection in these figures. Think what might have been done in the way of developing our own State had this capital been invested at home. It has been said that Maine is "a slow State," but this is not true. The State is all right if given only a half a chance, the wonder is that we have made any progress in face of this tremendous drain. We cann t undo what has already been done, but the brakes can and should be put on from this time out Bangor has contributed largely to these outside enterprises. Now an opportunity presents itself to aid a home enterprise that will place us in direct communication with the Larden of the East, give A despatch from Newark reports great us a large business that is anxious to come activity in the pearl button industry in here and add very materially to the genthal city. Portable Cooking Range, 1-

For Wood or Coal.

The Clarion Ringes have been before the public course and they have grown more popular each of Window and Door Upholstering. Please read what some of the leading dealers are about hits celebrated Range.

Figure 1 have a Riceper of Lynn, Mass., My We have sold several hundred Clarien Ranges in the past five years and have as yet to faind a case where one failed to work satisfactorily. They are spleadid bakers. No other Ranges in these parts can hold a candle to it.

The Kohley Frymsoe and Steam Heating Co., of Boston, say We have sold between four and five hundred Clarion Ranges to the best people in Ros. too, who prosessings them as heating the most consumed and quickest baking Range that they ever used.

Mosers A L. & E. F (Goss of Lewisten, asy, "We have sold at retail of the Charlon, New Clarton, Royal Charlon and Gold Charlon Ranges, not less than four thousand (4,000) and they have always given railresatisfaction. Another recarkable fact is that the good old State of Maine, whose motto is, "We Lead," has produced the best cooking range in the majoritical that is a point we are proof of. Heart, "Fost & Creckett of Dextor, my "We sold over seven hundred (700) Charlon Ranges, No pther Range can hill its place for its unfrailed qualities. No other Manufactures has even made a Eange to equal the Charlon, and why is a comma we make never comprehended."
we send to us for our $1 page Book of Teakle of the Clarion Ranges.

Washinston, D. C., May 16. The Navy pepartment has received information that the I-meralda and United States cruiser tharteston have arrived at Acapulco, Mexico. The Itata was not in sight. The Secretary of the Navy had a talk with the President to-day about the Itata with the President approved what had then done by the Navy Department. Therefore, the policy adopted will be pursued. The Secretary is reticent about the next top, lest the information should get to the thina insurgent war vessels. The understanding is, however, that the Charleston will continue the search for the Itata, and the total loss $500,000. The total number of dwellings burnes, is fifty and the total loss $500,000. The total insurance is unobtainable. Many burned places have no baurance. Hundreds of families are thrust upon their friends for accommodations. The life started at 6.30 last evening in this city are in smouldering runs.

[CONTINUED.] He now left the track and turned off to the eastward. The rain gradually cleared and the stars came out. Guid ing himself by them, Keppel walked on and on now clambering over steep ac-clivities, now plunging into hallows, now tolling over plowed meadows, forcing his way through bits of woodland, stealing past farm houses, where dogs barked and cocks crowed, but occasion-ally coming upon a stretch of road that went his way. Presently the short night wore away and dawn began to appear. Keppel halted and spent half an bour in oving the stains of much from his clothing and making himself look as pre-sentable as possible. His left arm pained him sev-m-ly, but he thought himself lucky in having no bones proken. In one of his new pockets he found a pen-kuife, and with this, as well as he could, he cut his hair short. In a couple of weeks his heard would have begun to grow, and he would be tolerably dis-

He now proceeded slowly, for he was very tired, and also sleepy and hangry. He had walked more than twenty mile He had walked more than twenty miles. At length, as the sun rose, he saw, half a mile off, a railway cutting extending toward a small, town. Thither he directed his steps, but lingered on the outsirts for an hour or two until the tot, beople should be awake. Finally he head a train coming, and managed to reach the station at the same time that the engine draw up at the platform. Then, as it steamed away again, he walked into the fown, as if just arrived walked into the fown, as if just arrived from New York, and seeing a plain but comfortable looking inn near at hand, he entered and asked for a room and some breakfast.)

While his eggs and coffee were being builed he locked himself into his room to think over his situation. But the future wasso vague that he was able to come to no conclusion. As soon as his money should be gone he would be at the morey of direumstances. He examined again the contents of his puckets. There were eight dollars in money, two or three letters addressed to Burton Fairfax, Esq., of Poughkeepsie, a couple of receipted bills, and nothing else—exor recented bills, and nothing else—except a cutting from a newspaper, headed "Some Developments of the Trent Murder," which Keppel proceeded to read with interest. Its date was apparently of the day mexicuse: of the day previous: The will of the late Harry Trent was discovered yesterday in a package of documents left, by him in a bureau drawer at the Bellevue hotel, in Philadelphia. He spent the night of Felmary twenty-second last at this place, and seems to have forgotten to take the docu-ments away with him. The will is dated February twenty, eighteen hundred and seventy, and is very short, devising all his property, real and personal to my wife, Sarah Althea Trent." It is proper-ly signed and attested. This will be of interest to those who ventured to express doubts as to the gennineness of the marriage amounced in court last. Tuesday by Mrs. Trent—until then known as Mrs. Sallie Matchin. Mr. Trent at all events appears to have shared her opinion regarding its validity. The other documents in the package were not of an unpertent character.

"It will be noticed that no provision is made it for will for Mrs. Paragonal her made in the will for Mrs. Raven and her daughter Olympia, who are understood to have been distantly related to the deceased, and to have been receiving from him an annual stipend of some eight thousand dollars. This fact will probably occasion some comment, as it was intimated at the late trial that Mr. Trent ind proposed to make Miss Raven his wife. Possibly the desire that he should make such a proposal was father to the statement that he had done so. His will seems to show not only the -baselessness seems to show not only the chastessness of the assertion, but that for some reason or other Mr. Trent intended in the future to let these two ladies take care of themselves. It is to be hoped that they passess independent resources.

"In Mr. Trent's breast pocket at the time of his death was found a letter matter in additional the terror of the death."

written in cipher, the purport of which was not made out. It was not produced at the trial, as the prosecution was not of the opinion that it could throw any light in the case. It is now published, however, in the hope that some cipher expert may be able to cheddate it, and thus, perhaps, furnish an explanation of some of the mysterious circumstances that yet surround Mr. Trent's tragic end. The letter is as follows:

" Shipi F, npi. Cq gal F, pil pink oghi milig upi. E, mkpi C, Khuh F, pion qolg C qkiu F, hqon polg B qkng F, olmh qolg C mhgq ongk qha B hkq F, hnjq ngmo mioq S lmpi. "The paper on which this enrious effusion is written appears to be of French mannfacture. Such was the newspaper article, some assages of which moved Keppel painully. Olympia, it seemed, would be repassages of which moves arrays pain-fully. Olympia, it seemed, would be re-duced to want jinst at the time when he was powerless to render her any assist-ance. The situation greatly perplexed him; for Harry Trent had told him with his own lips that he in ended reserving Olympia for himself, and he had given it out publicly that Mrs. and Miss Raven were to live with him in his new house yet he was married to Sally Matchin at that very time, and five days before had executed a will cutting off Olympia without even the proverbial shilling. There was something old about this; it demanded investigation. The first thing to be done was to find out the real impr derer of Harry Trent; the remainder of the mystery would probably resolve itself. But who would find the murderer out? Obviously, no one would concern himself about the matter unless Keppel himself did, and certainly he was in no position to enter upon such a quest at present. He could only promise himself that he would never forget the purpose to do so, nor rest until it had been accomplished.

As for the cipher, although Keppel was somewhat of an adept at cryptic writing, he soon perceived that here was a problem out of the common run. It did not present to the veget test of the respond to the usual tests. Thus, of the eventeen different characters (commass and periods included) that composed it. three occurred six times or less, seven from twelve to twenty-nine from twelve to twenty-nine name, and seven from thirty to forty times, and seven from thirty to forty times. Plainly, therefore, they could not its signs answering to letters of the alphabet. Again, the cipher consisted of groups of four characters (neither more nor less) and of single capitals. Of the four character combinations—over sixty in all—only seven occurred more han once in the course of the composition. Of the the course of the composition. Of the separate capitals F occurred twenty-two times, C seventeen times, B six S five and E four times. All this was very puzzling, and was to be elucidated, if at all, only after protonged stucy, of which Kappel's brain, at that juncture, was far from being capable. Meanwhile the housemaid knocked at the door and summoned him to breakfast. He replaced the gipter in his pocket and went down.

After eating heartily he went hack to ness of Long Island than in a large town. Perhaps he might get temporary employ-ment with some farmer, or he might find a captain of a fishing smack to ship him for a cruise. When he was a boy in New Eng and he had lived near the seashore and had learned how to sail a boat.

The wind blew from the southwest. and the catboat started out on the star-board tack, headed nearly for her destination. In two hours the coast was close on board; they ran into the harbor, and Keppel, having paid his dollar, jumped ashore. It was then within an hour or so of sunset-a warm, quiet evening. He set out to walk at haphazard, and soon found himself following a narrow track through an apparently interminable growth of small pine and oak. Once in a while he passed a lonely farmhouse; but though he was getting tired and hungry again he could not make up his mind to ask for shelter.

Night came on and found him still tramping onward, with woods on either hand. But as the darkness incressed the path seemed to fade away and be-come obliterated, and he was soon sturbling through thick underbrash. The boughs and twigs whipped his face and the briars caught his feet. Stagger-ing forward, exhausted and impatient, he felt his feet sinking in a middy ooze, and discovered that he was on the bor-ders of a swamp. He turned to the right and began to skirt along its borders, but again and again be narrowly escaped plunging neck and cars in the treacher-ous morass. Frogs creaked on all sides and mosquitoes buzzed around his head. He lost all sense of direction, and thought only of putting one foot before the other. Often he fell, but scrambled up again and groped onward. Whichever way he and groped onward. Whichever way no turned the awamp seemed to lie in wait for him. He thought: "It will swallow me up in the end! And it was for this that I except from the railroad wreck."

Just then he stumbled up a slope, and his feet tred on firmer ground. The bushes and trees thinged away. Looking bushes and trees thinned away. Locking up he saw before him a black, rectangular mass. He drew nearer; it was a house There was no light in the windows seemed ruinous and deserted. But it was a human habitation, and would suffice He passed around the corner and found the door; it yielded to his hand. He en tered, and felt his way along the parti-tion of the hallway to another door on the left. Passing in he saw a glean of light|through a crevice in front of him. In another moment he had crossed the floor and was standing on the threshold of an inner room.

There was a low bed against the opposito wall. At its head stood a table, on which was a lighted candle and some small bottles. The forniture of the room was wretched in the extreme and the atmosphere foul and stifling.

On the bed was stretched the gaunt and ghastly figure of a man, who, as Keppel appeared, raised binself with difficulty on his left elbow, and with his right hand leveled a revolver at the intruder. The glare of his sunken eyes was appalling, and his hand shook so that the pistol wavered from side to side. "Hall! or I shoot you!" he said, with a

"Don't short? cried Keppel, lifting his hand. "I mean you no harm. I'm fainting from fatigue and hunger. I must eat and sleep."

The man lowered his weapon. "Ah:

it is no ghost, then?" he muttered in French, and sank back on his pillow. Keppel appreached and looked down on him. He seemed all skin and bone; his hair grew disorderly on his forebeal, and the lower part of his face was covered with a three weeks stubble of red heard. His skin was dark yellow, his hips black and parched. Keppel had never seen the yellow fever, but he per-ceived that the man was dying. He had arrived at this deserted spot in time to behold the curse of Maurice Solangs fulfilled upon the trief who had betrayed

The Marguerite carnation is one of the most valuable of recent introductions for those who cannot grow the ordinary flor ist pinks, for, in a comparatively short time, good strong plants can be raised from seed and flowered, and it is surprising how really good the flowers are. The percentage of single flowers is very small. Nasturtiums are often planted in rich soil. This is a mistake, for very few flowers are then produced: but when sown in poor soil they will flower abundantly. The same rule holds with Salvia splendens,

May and August are good months. The impression prevails that there is more risk with them than with deciduous trees, and this is undoubtedly true when trees of a considerable size are taken. It is essential that there should be immediate root action to supply the immediate draft upon the resources of the tree. It is thus evident that fall is not a favorable time for plant-In our climate there is little or no root action from November until May. HARLOW'S DRUG STORE, There is a very general agreement among planters that early spring is also an objec-tionable time. The ground in March or April is usually wet and the root action must necessarily be very sluggish, and mable to supply the increasing demand from evaporation. But in the month of May, says Popular Gardening, the ground has become warmer and all the organs of the tree are excited into activity. It, has been found by uniform experience that a most suitable time for removal is just as the buds begin to swell and indications of returning life appear. There is say coough
